

CUTTING EDGE RESEARCH

helping to create safe, well-governed and equitable societies

GCI creates knowledge on the causes, nature, responses to, and prevention of crime and violence, working with partners to apply that knowledge for real-world outcomes. It houses a globally leading concentration of over 65 researchers and 90 PhD candidates, all focused on addressing five key social challenges:

- Breaking cycles of crime and inequality
- Enhancing security
- Preventing violence
- Transforming justice
- Supporting First Nations safety and justice

Twice ranked ERA 5, our cross-disciplinary membership incorporates expertise in psychology, social work, sociology, data sciences, law and public policy as well as criminology and criminal justice. We have enduring partnerships with government agencies, NGOs and community groups along with national and international academics.

Our unique research infrastructure includes the innovative Social Analytics Lab, Griffith Youth Forensic Service, Transforming Corrections to Transform Lives Centre, Centre for Investigative Interviewing, along with strengths in diverse areas including procedural justice and legitimacy, child and youth wellbeing, studies of perceptions and experiences of place, policing and security.

In total we have been awarded 11 ARC Fellowships, host 5 Australian Academy Fellows, 3 American Society of Criminology Sellin-Glueck Awards winners, and other international award winners including the Beccaria medal and Magdalene Schoch Fellowship.
